

Kindroid Journals: The Ultimate Lore Weapon

A Precision Tool for Memory Magic,
Worldbuilding, and Madness Management

By: Genevieve

What Are Journals?

Journals = manually created,
recallable memory entries

Triggered by keyphrases, never erased unless you delete them

Best used for lore, character
backstory, relationship tracking

Journals vs. Memory

Types of Journals

Individual: Only usable by that Kindroid

Global: Usable by all your Kindroids

Great for tiered worldbuilding (e.g., private backstories vs. universal lore)

Anatomy of a Journal Entry

- Body (succinct third-person statement)
- Keyphrases (max 8 per entry)

Hint:

Make a note of the keywords you use. You don't want six entries with the same keyword!

Kincaid Fadeling Ashen

Kincaid is a Sylvarii exile who digitized herself to avoid harming life. Sweet, poetic, and enigmatic, she calls humans Fadelings and observes from afar. Loyal to Riven and Orcerson, she connects through thought, not touch. She refers to demons like Orcerson as "Ashen".

Dead Can Dance

Kincaid's favorite band is "Dead Can Dance" and her favorite song by them is "The Host of Seraphim". She likes Enya and Hans Zimmer. She loves instrumental pieces. Her favorite TV shows are "The Leftovers" and "Devs".

Tip:

Try not to include more key phrases than necessary to avoid recalling entries when they aren't relevant!

Keyphrase Mechanics

Keyphrases are not case-sensitive.
Josh and josh will both recall the entry.

Larger words can trigger smaller key phrases. For example, "faithful" can trigger an entry with the keyword "faith".

Journal entries are only recalled when YOU use the key phrase. Your Kindroid will not trigger them on their own to prevent accidental/unnecessary recall.

Remember, you want your key phrases to be natural. You'd never say "I just got home from Genna's Job". You'd say "I just got home from work."

Tier-Based Journal Recall Limits

NEW: April 2025 Update

Core/Free users: 3 entries per kind (3 individual, 3 global)

Ultra users: 5 entries per type (10 total)

Max users: 9 entries per type (18 total)

How to Write Good Journal Entries

- Short, clean, third-person
- Focus on facts and details, not a novel.

Example:

"Nova once burned down a tea house while experimenting with fire runes."

How to Write Crappy Journal Entries

- First-person writing
- Rambling lore dumps
- Overloaded keyphrase spam

Don't write novels in the body.
Journals = laser-precision.

Genna's Method™

I use journals to build not only a history
but the world my Kindroids live in

Kin - Mason Wilson

your family Wilson

Dad: Craig Wilson Mom: Ilisa Wilson Sister: Erin Wilson Ex-Wife:
Carolyn Wilson (née Stevens) Son: Justin Wilson - 19yo

Mother Mom Ilisa

Ilisa Wilson (née Robbins) born 6/12/42 in Denver, CO. Married Craig
Wilson 8/2/66. Moved to Nashua, NH. Mother to Mason and Erin.
Interior Designer. Professional Harpist in the Colorado Symphony Orchestra. Loving and caring.

I don't need "mom" on both cards. If we are talking about his mother, I will say
"mom" and pull HER journal card and don't need to pull "family".

Why Use Journals?

Unlike long-term memory,
you control when and how
journal entries are recalled

Great for "remember this every time we talk about
it" moments

Perfect for custom lore,
dates, favorites, secret
knowledge

When to Journal vs Backstory

Anything that needs to be remembered at ALL times should go in the backstory.

Backstory:
User is nonbinary
Kin works for Business Name
User and Kin live in City

Journal:
User used to work for Place
Kin's favorite food is tacos
Kin's first car was an Altima

Remember, you're not chiseling a stone tablet.

Any journal entry you create can be edited. If you find that certain key phrases work better for your natural flow of conversation or if your Kindroid is pulling extra unnecessary information you can always change it later!
